We organize events and conversations with fellow artists at the intersection of craft, science, philosophy, and spirituality to support one another in enlightening and healing creative community. Our intention is to increase our capacity for creative empowerment, heightening our sensitivity to the vibrational character of our bodies and surroundings.

Many of us have forgotten how to listen deeply to our environment. Our mind's eye has been developed through flattened representations of reality (screens and pictures), within a traumatized industrial system. These illusory versions of reality dissociate us from the energy of the present.

However, it is possible to directly perceive spatial motion across multiple dimensions, through practices that engage the body and mind in rhythmic awareness of our living, breathing environment.

Our whole body is designed to hear and sense the vibrational character of the space around us, the timbre of the air, and the electromagnetic pulses of life. We can truly feel the ways reality moves within us, through us, and around us.

Each being has an individuated perceptual experience of the energetic fabric, yet we participate in a collective conversation. We can remember to respect the unique experiences of one another as well as the unique creative process that is the willful unfolding of our own life.

“Making Space” is a creative, communal intention to re-engage with our senses in a personal and shared awareness of space. Our community promotes a connected and flexible way of engaging with our world — allowing energy, love, and information to express freely through our bodies and minds in a harmonious way.
